

Isolde daughter of King Benedict and Queen Elizabeth.

Having a long history of ruling the country of (Placeholder). Benedict the first getting the throne at a young age having his father die of Famine and going through a war with his neighbor country, long and gruesome it took a decade of fighting but Benedict did come as victor and reshaped the land to his will. Some may call him a brute a tyrant but only one person could see who he really was his love Elizabeth, as they ruled together establishing new trades with other kings and dynasties. The once feared and tyrant king came to be loved by the people, some saying he was growing soft, over the decades other country's would slowly take advantage of this fact. The kingdom never faltered but the glory days were far behind them.

In those years the beloved king got a daughter to his dismay. He wanted a heir to the throne a son... but that he never got only Isolde remained the light in her eyes where something that everyone wanted to behold but Benedict was never satisfied. Not strong enough not smart enough every day pushed more and more. Benedict didn't want the same thing to happen something that has been happening for generations, the next heir not being ready like he was. That pain the loss of family everything scarred him for life. He swore even if Isolde never saw it to act like a mentor, his ways harsh and cruel but it made Isolde in who she is now. He was there for every event in Isolde's life, judging but secretly feeling proud of the progress his offspring is making. Isolde would grow up living the life of a son that was never born... even her mother Elizabeth who once held Isolde close to her heart so close that his mind came to a stop, she would give into Benedict's pushes and have Isolde be trained like a man.

To become the next heir Isolde trained day and night learning how to fight how to understand even the most advanced of literature but it was never enough. She never knew what she wanted yes she was strong smart and did everything until her bones broke of what her father wanted until the runes were found in a distant land, every king, lord, peasant anyone sought the power of this magic. But few could truly wield its power. When Benedict finally got his hand on the scrolls on how to wield these runes. Isolde was instructed to learn and master them, and so she did, but this time she had something a feeling she never had before passion and zest... for the next decade she learned, fought and became a prodigy of her age. Those years she truly grew into her self. Always a slave to her father's expectations and commands not feeling anything but anger and sadness for who she was born at, but now she found herself she found Isolde a truly happy and passionate woman, she loved reading and coming to understand the runes, each page she read each rune she learned the basics of. Mixing and matching the elements, this was her passion and she knew it, but it would also lead to her public image being destroyed "witch" is what she got called, learned to fast to happy swinging around this magic. She was judged and seen as something or someone else by the people she holds so dear she grew a deep frustration towards her people. Her passion for the runes but her sadness and anger her people feel towards her is something she has yet to come to terms with. Even after a decade what the scrolls speak of a true master seems many years away but she has learned the basic of the runes. A true heir to the throne, Isolde now not only earned the respect of her father as she is now of the age of 25 having her mother recently pass away from Smallpox. the kingdom now is awaiting a new leader. and Isolde will have to take the final steps to make her ruthless father proud. but these hopes and dreams would be shattered, as a war-band from the far north not completely human but not monster either would start attacking other kingdom's and lords. they seem to have runes but far and few in between taking most be brute strength, Isolde is now seeking guidance in her next step in life. as she needs to make her father proud and respect the wishes of her mother who o so loved her once upon a time.
